Reading

1. Father's Day originated in the United States in 1910. Sonora Smart Dodd of Spokane, Washington, invented the holiday after learning about Mother's Day in church one Sunday. Sonora's own mother had passed away during childbirth. Her father had to raise six children on his own. To honour her own dad, Sonora chose a date near his birthdate to celebrate Father's Day. Each year on that day, Sonora invited people to wear red roses to honour a living father and white roses to honour a deceased father. With hard work, Sonora convinced the local government to make the holiday official. In 1966, President Lyndon Johnson signed a proclamation declaring the third Sunday in June as Father's Day. Sonora Smart Dodd is often referred to as "the Mother of Father's Day." Countries around the world celebrate Father's Day on one day or another each year.
2. Do you give your dad a necktie for Father's Day? This is the most common gift given on Father's Day. Other popular gifts include golf clubs, fishing rods, and home improvement tools. In the 1930s, a National Father's Day Committee was formed in New York City. The council was made up of many menswear retailers. Council members helped promote Sonora's holiday. This is how it became so commercialized. Many children complain that it is more difficult to shop for their dad than their mom. This explains why many Father's Day gifts are last-minute purchases!
3. Not all Father's Day gifts are store-bought items. Young children often make Father's Day gifts in school. Typical handmade crafts for fathers include picture frames, drawings, and coupon books. What father doesn't want to receive a coupon for a free hug or foot massage? Older children often arrange activities with their dads for Father's Day. Sons or daughters take their fathers to baseball games or offer to pay for a round of golf. Fathers typically appreciate the gift of time more than any other gift. This special day can be difficult for those who have lost their fathers. Family get-togethers with lots of children around can help keep their spirits high.
4. Many children say that the way to their father's heart is through his stomach. In other words, chicken wings and beer or a bowl of homemade chili with bread may be the perfect gift for Father's Day. Most kids know their father's favourite dessert or meal. Is your father in his glory when you serve his favourite comfort food for dinner?
5. The roles of fatherhood have changed with the times. These days, many couples share the domestic duties equally. Many moms are busy with their own careers. Dads need to do their fair share around the house. Stay-at-home dads and single dads are on the rise. Besides getting involved with their children's extracurricular activities, these fathers take on other nurturing duties. They read bedtime stories, stay home with kids on sick days, and even change diapers. Fathers who participate equally in the early years typically have a strong bond with their children in the older years.
